Captain Andrew’s Column

It’s difficult this week to think of anything other than the tragedy of the earthquake in Turkey and Syria. We see on the news the desolation, desperation and heart-breaking images and reports from both countries. It is tough to get our minds around what has happened, and it raises so many questions in our hearts about what, why and how. But amidst all the distressing scenes we see glimpses of hope; people being found alive, babies and children among them. This does encourage us and I’m sure spurs the people engaged in the rescue and relief effort on. Hope is something that we can all bring in small and significant ways. Today we are thinking about bringing hope. Through words from Isaiah and Jesus we are encouraged to reach out and help those who need it, being Salt and light to them; in other words, coming alongside them, bringing hope and help. This relates very well in our Self Denial period where we focus on different stories about young people where we can bring hope to by our giving by giving up!
