Why do we look back spending time thinking about things that are so horrendous that it is difficult to believe that they could ever happen? Why upset ourselves thinking about events from the past that have caused so much death, disablement, and physical and mental pain across the world? As someone who is quite a pacifist I do get concerned that we don’t have any hint of celebration or sense of victory that we “won” this or that battle. In my mind there are never any winners in war, it always leaves untold suffering on both sides in its wake. Remembrance Day should be a time to remind ourselves of 2 things: 1 That the slightest disagreement not dealt with can build up and lead to tragic consequences. 2 Each of us can and should be peacemakers where we are. May God show each of us how we can contribute to the world being a more peaceful place.
