Today we are looking a bit closer at how the men bore quite a big responsibility, and see that the balance may not have been as unfair as we often assume. The man was the head of the family and as such was expected to provide for all the family’s physical needs and their spiritual wellbeing. If the family didn’t have enough money for the essentials of life or one of them falls into sin guess who got the blame, it was the father for not guiding his family in the right direction. Even though the prodigal son brought shame upon his father, the father still longed for him to return and God welcomes sinners back in the same way.
