It must never be haphazard and careless. Our coming together for worship should never be “just army, just church”. When we assemble for worship as a group of God’s people, this must become a place where we are ever searching our hearts and preparing ourselves to lift up an offering of pure praise to our heavenly father, because of the work and the continuing ministry of his son and our Saviour, Jesus Christ. This morning, we need to think carefully about the words of this Psalm, before we can say “Bless the Lord, O my soul and all that is within me bless his holy name”.
